WIRELESS LOGIC

After having dug to a depth of 10 feet last year, British scientists found traces of copper wire dating back 200 years and came to the conclusion that their ancestors already had a telephone network more than 150 years ago.

Not to be outdone by the Brits, in the weeks that followed, an American archaeologist dug to a depth of 20 metres, and shortly after, a story was published in the New York Times:

"American archaeologists, finding traces of 250-year-old copper wire, have concluded that their ancestors already had an advanced high-tech communications network at least 50 years earlier than the British".

One week later, the Australian Dept. of Mineral Resources in Canberra reported the following:

"After digging to a depth of 30 metres in the Kakadu National Park in the Northern Territory a self-taught indigenous archaeologist reported that he found absolutely nothing and has therefore concluded that 250 years ago, Australia had already gone wireless.

CLEVER ANSWERS (sometimes called smart arse responses)

ANSWER 5

It was mealtime during a flight on a British Airways plane: "Would you like dinner?" the flight attendant asked the man seated in the front row. "What are my choices?" the man asked. "Yes or no," she replied.

ANSWER 4

A lady was picking through the frozen Chickens at a Woolworths store but she couldn't find one big enough for her family. She asked a passing assistant, "Do these Chickens get any bigger?" The assistant replied, "I'm afraid not, they're ah dead."

ANSWER3

The highway patrolman got out of his car and the teenager he stopped for speeding rolled down his window. "I've been waiting for you all day," the policeman said. The young driver replied, "Well I got here as fast as I could."

ANSWER2

A truck driver was driving along on a country road. A sign came up that read "Low Bridge Ahead." Before he realised it, the bridge was directly ahead and he got stuck under it Cars were backed up for several kilometres. Finally, a police car arrived. The policeman got out of his car and walked to the truck's cab and said to the driver, "Got stuck, eh?" The truck driver said, "No, I was delivering this bridge and ran out of fuel."

ANSWER OF THE YEAR

A teacher was reminding her high school pupils about the final exam due the following day. "Now listen to me, I won't tolerate any excuses for you not being here tomorrow. I might consider a nuclear attack, a serious personal injury, illness, or a death in your immediate family, but that's it, no other excuses whatsoever!" A smirking teenager at the back of the room raised his hand and asked, "What would happen if I came in tomorrow suffering from complete and utter sexual exhaustion?" The entire class was reduced to laughter and sniggering.

When silence was restored, the teacher smiled at the student, shook her head and sweetly said, "Well, I would expect you to write the exam with your other hand."

ARAB TAXIS

A visiting Arabian enters an English taxi and once he is seated asks the cab driver to please turn off the radio, because it is decreed by his religion that he must not listen to such music. He states that in the time of the prophet, there was no music; especially Western music which is music of the infidels. So the cab driver politely switches off the radio, stops the cab and opens the back door.

The Arab asks him: "What are you doing man?"

The cabby answers: "In the time of the prophet there were no taxis, and this is where you wait for the camel train"

MAKING SENSE

A Tennessee couple, Dave and Rebecca Kosmitis, both bona fide rednecks, had 9 children.

They went to the doctor to see about getting Dave fixed. The doctor gladly started the required procedure and asked them what finally made them make the decision. Why, after 9 children, would they choose to do this?

Dave replied that they had read in a recent article that 1 out of every 10 children being born in the United States was Mexican, and they didn't want to take a chance on having a Mexican Baby because neither of them could speak Spanish.

MISSING THE PUNCH

A priest who was having trouble engaging his congregation went to a conference to help improve his sermons. One session of the conference was about humour and the priest, who had never been able to tell a good joke, decided to go along.

The speaker at the session boldly approached the pulpit and, gathering the crowd's attention, said, 'The best years of my life were spent in the arms of a woman who wasn't my wife!' The crowd, including the priest, were shocked.

The speaker followed up by saying, 'That woman was my mother!' The crowd burst into laughter and the speaker delivered the rest of his lesson on humour.

The next week, the priest decided to try to tell a joke in his sermon. As he approached the pulpit, he tried to rehearse the joke in his head. It suddenly seemed a bit foggy to him. Nevertheless, he decided to push on.

Speaking loudly into the microphone, the priest began, 'The greatest years of my life were spent in the arms of a woman who wasn't my wife'. The congregation sat in mute shock. The priest tried in vain for about ten seconds to remember the second half of the joke, then finally blurted out, '... and I can't remember who she was!'
